

14 DYNAMIC PLACE AWARDS (AN461-2004)

The Twa Semis community garden (Charleston) has won the 2004 Dynamic Place Award for the transformation of the garden, which was undertaken with the support of the Beechgrove Garden. The project was based on designs and ideas generated by young people.

The Award recognises:

- the involvement of communities
- the matching of skills to places
- training in place development.

Val Dinsmore - former Centre Manager for the Charleston Neighbourhood Centre and Library- who was responsible for the project, was also the winner of the Individual of the Year Award in recognition of her role in bringing the Dynamic Place to fruition.

The event is organised by Scottish Enterprise and is sponsored by Scottish National Heritage, Communities Scotland, Highlands and Islands Enterprise, The Regeneration and Renewal Journal.

Details of the Dynamic Place Awards can be found at the following website: www.scottish-enterprise.com/dynamicplaceawards